Records Retention Schedule

Meridian Infra Ltd - Legal and Compliance - Reviewed March 2026

1. Why records are kept

Records are kept for as long as the law or the business needs them, and no longer. When the period below ends, the record owner arranges secure disposal: shredding for paper and certified wiping for electronic media.

2. Finance records

Invoices, purchase orders, payment vouchers and books of account: eight years from the end of the financial year to which they relate. Bank statements and reconciliations: eight years. Tax returns and assessments: ten years.

3. People records

Personnel files of former employees: seven years after the last working day. Payroll records: eight years. CVs and interview notes of unsuccessful candidates: six months after the position is filled, unless the candidate agrees to a longer period.

4. Security and facilities

CCTV footage from office premises: 30 days, unless it is needed for an investigation, in which case it is kept until the case is closed. Visitor registers: one year. Access card logs: 180 days.

5. Contracts and legal

Signed customer and supplier contracts: eight years after expiry. Litigation files: ten years after the final judgement. Board minutes and statutory registers: permanently.

6. Legal hold

When Legal issues a hold notice, normal disposal stops for every record named in the notice until Legal lifts the hold in writing.